The History

Lake Kora was built in 1898 as Kamp Kill Kare, a magnificent log-and-stone compound on a vast forest preserve, with its own 500-acre lake. It was an exclusive retreat, but soon the site of many grand affairs. Yale and Harvard teams practiced on the softball diamond and the eminent families of the Gilded Age came to dance on the Boathouse docks. No expense was spared on luxury and mountain charm: birch bark writing paper, a Venetian gondola, a floating lantern-lit bridge, and even a dancing black bear. Still in private hands today, the camp has remained astonishingly intact for more than a century.

The Season

Lake Kora is available for bookings July through October. July through August 15th is reserved for buyouts, with individual bookings available August 15th through October, depending upon availability.

Set in the beautiful Adirondacks, guests enjoy the summer months and outdoors - diving into the lake, canoing, and biking on the trails.

For the fall, it is absolutely stunning as the leaves change to vibrant colors and the air is more crisp. Guests continue enjoying all the outdoor adventures, retiring in the evening to the hot tub, meals by the great stone fireplace, and bowling on the heritage alley.

Average temperatures

- July & August: Mid 70 degrees (74 and 75 range) during the day, with evenings mid 50s
- September & October: High 60s to low 70s in the day, with evenings in the 40s

Accommodation

Exquisite guest rooms are spread among log cottages near the lake's edge. Each is a realm of quiet and comfort, with original furnishings and fixtures made by Lake Kora craftsmen a century ago.
